

Whenever I Have Children I am Going to Talk to Them About Respect and Responsibility
Noah Voldman

My name is XX, I am XX years old and today I am going to talk about something very important, which is the values of my school. The values I am going to talk about are respect and responsibility that are very important for my life and for the life ahead. I want to be a better person with these two characteristics that I will take with me in my life. When I have my children I want to take these values to them and these values are always having competence, creativity, integrity, respect, responsibility, and solidarity. And I want my kids to respect family and friends and everyone involved and help them. And those are the respects that I want to show them because I think it is very important for my children's growth and everything that is good for them. With these respects or traits they will have a good healthy life and no fuss because these respects are the best respects they will ever have in life or do in life. I will love my children as my mother and father loved me. I will always take this knowledge to them, they are the reason for my life and I will always be with them until the end. My children have to have these respects. I will be a very good father to my children so that they have an exemplary education.

My parents taught me the values of respect, being responsible when I leave the house for a party, mall, and other places.
